The traditional approach to asset planning in New Zealand is starting to present issues. Tens of thousands of trusts in New Zealand have been set up by Baby Boomers over the past few decades, and now that many of these trusts are packed with substantial wealth, the next generation of family are, or will be, keen to access these funds.

Henry Brandts-Giesen and Sarah Kelly from our Private Wealth practice, write for The New Zealand Law Journal, and examine the ways in which we need to rethink asset planning in New Zealand.
